Industry Overview

Future job prospects for administrative assistants are expected to be good. Changes in technology have affected the duties of administrative assistants. Many employers now expect you to take on more complex tasks such as:

- developing spreadsheets
- drafting correspondence
- supervising databases
- updating websites
- producing presentation materials

As a result, you will be in higher demand if you have a wider variety of computer skills.

There is good opportunity for flexible work arrangements. If you work with a placement agency (also known as a “temp” agency) you can work on short-term placements with private sector companies and government clients.
