1. BC Economic Regions

Introduction

B.C.'s economy is constantly evolving. And these changes affect the number and type of jobs available. Over the next decade, the demand for workers is expected to surpass the supply for many occupations.

Influences driving BC's economy include:

- attracting major project investment throughout the province
- an increased focus on small business and the service sector
- a strong relationship with Japan, China, Korea and India making BC an important trade hub between Asia and North America

Several industries are expected to offer particularly strong job opportunities:

- green technology, digital media and life sciences
- traditional industries such as natural resources (expected to grow through innovation)
- service industries including health care, high-tech and retail sales

British Columbia is a large province with seven different economic regions. The majority of BC's population lives in the Mainland/Southwest region. However, there is a demand for workers in all regions of the province. This guide discusses job opportunities in each region of BC.

2. Cariboo Region

Region Overview

Located in central B.C., the Cariboo is an area of vast landscapes and outdoor recreational opportunities. The population is 154,300, 4% of BC's total population.

More than half of these people live in the city of Prince George, the largest city in the region. It is known as the northern capital of BC. Prince George is also home to the main campus of the University of Northern British Columbia.

With a considerable number of large natural resource-oriented projects slated for construction across the north, existing Prince George businesses are already seeing an increased demand for their products and services. The city is seeing an influx of new businesses.

In response, the City of Prince George established the Move Up Prince George initiative, designed to recruit workers from other areas of BC.

Industries

Traditionally, the Cariboo region has been a resource based economy mostly focused on the forestry industry, mining, and oil and gas.

However, due to the large number of major projects proposed or currently underway, the professional services, construction and manufacturing sectors are among the fastest growing sectors in Prince George. In addition, the city is experiencing increased expansion in the healthcare and education sectors.

3. Kootenay Region

Region Overview

The Kootenay region is located in the southeast corner of British Columbia. The total population is 146,264.

The Kootenay region is a leading destination for outdoor activities including hiking, skiing, and fishing. It is also known for its wonderfully restored heritage towns, thriving arts communities and many cultural events.

Cranbrook is the largest city in Kootenay, with approximately 19,259 people. It is the center for commercial and government services.

There are two public colleges in the region, College of the Rockies with its main campus in Cranbrook and Selkirk College with its main campus in Castlegar.

4. Mainland / Southwest

Region overview

More than 60% of BC's population, approximately 2.7 million people, live in the Lower Mainland / Southwest region. Vancouver is the largest city in the region and in the province. It is one of the most ethnically diverse areas in Canada.

People are attracted to the Mainland Southwest region because of the metropolitan atmosphere, diversity of job opportunities, multiculturalism, educational institutions, warm climate and recreation activities.

5. North Coast and Nechako

Region overview

The North Coast / Nechako are separate economic regions but government reporting statistics often combine them because they both have small populations.

Prince Rupert, Terrace and Kitimat are the largest cities in the region. Residence and tourists are attracted to the area because of the lifestyle and many recreational activities. Full-time wages are comparable to provincial averages, but housing (for both renters and homeowners) costs about 30 percent less.

There are many major projects under construction or in the planning stages in the North Coast region including the expansion of Rio Tinto's aluminum smelter in Kitimat, a copper/gold project, hydroelectric projects and the terminal expansion at Prince Rupert. Proposed future projects include liquefied natural gas facilities and gas pipeline projects. These projects are bringing jobs and new opportunities to the area.

Industries

Natural resources, particularly mining, forestry, and fishing, have always played a critical role in the area's economy. In recent years, the economy has shifted, with many significant investments in infrastructure, transportation and mining.

There is increasing possibilities that the North Coast and Nechako regions may participate in the oil and gas industry from Alberta and the Northeast region of BC.

6. Northeast

Region Overview

The Northeast is one of the fastest-growing regions in BC thanks to the rapid development of the energy sector. The Northeast region boasts the province's lowest unemployment rate and there is a high demand for workers.

This is one of the least-populated regions of the province, home to just over 68,300 people. Fort St. John is the largest urban center in the region, with a population of approximately 20,000.

The Northeast Region boasts some of the highest annual salaries in the province. Housing is also affordable, and there are tax incentives for northern residents.

7. Thompson-Okanagan

Region Overview

Located in the interior of B.C., Thompson-Okanagan is a popular tourist destination. Its diverse economy is based on agriculture, tourism, the service sector, logging and manufacturing.

The pleasant climate and the many recreational activities have been credited for the region's increasing population growth. Kelowna is the largest city in the region and the third largest city in the province. About three-quarters of the people in this region live in urban centres and one-quarter live in rural areas.
