2. Am I Suited For This Job?

Bus Drivers, Transit & Subway Operators should have:

- excellent driving skills
- good communication skills and interpersonal skills to interact with passengers
- organization and time-management skills for co-ordinating passenger pick-ups
- a thorough knowledge of the areas they drive in

They should be:

- able to concentrate despite distractions
- able to follow instructions carefully
- able to think and act quickly in various situations
- patient

Most people entering these occupations can expect to work part time through evenings, weekends and sometimes holidays before working full time. Split shifts are also common. Those who have been in the industry longer can expect more regular shifts and full-time hours (40 hours per week). Public transit operators are more likely to be part of a union and work full time. School bus drivers usually only work part time.

These workers may also have to handle difficult passengers from time to time.

4. What Is The Job Outlook In BC?

Jobbank Canada reports that the employment outlook will be good for bus drivers, subway operators and other transit operators (NOC 7512) in British Columbia for the 2017-2019 period. The following factors contributed to this outlook:

- employment growth will lead to several new positions.
- several positions will become available due to retirements.
- there are a moderate number of unemployed workers with recent experience in this occupation.

5. How do I become a Bus driver, transit or subway operator?

Certification is not required to be a Bus driver or transit operator in BC. Employers do require some secondary school education, and a high school diploma is generally preferred.

As competition for transit driver openings is often very strong, some post-secondary education and excellent communications and interpersonal skills give applicants a definite advantage. Other requirements may include:

- a Class 2 driver's license with airbrake endorsement and at least one to five years of safe driving experience
- on-the-job training that may take up to three months to complete
- basic first aid, which may be included in on-the-job training
- medical examination
- criminal record check

Networking, Volunteering and Temporary Agencies

Many positions are filled by people who have been recommended by someone they know. Networking, working as a volunteer or registering with a temporary employment agency are good ways of helping you find jobs and meet people in your industry.

Networking and the Hidden Job Market:

When looking for work, be sure to talk to friends, relatives and neighbours. They may know someone who is hiring! Working as a volunteer, attending events, and joining clubs and associations are good ways to gain "Canadian experience." They are also good ways to meet people to learn about the local job market.
