Industry Overview

Population growth, an aging population, and technological advancement in diagnosis and treatment, are increasing the demand for dental services. Industry reports the current supply of new graduates is insufficient to meet demand. In particular, there is currently a shortage of dentists in rural areas of the province. As such, new graduates may find increased employment opportunities in more rural areas of the province, where employers have more difficulty finding qualified dentists.

Job Outlook in BC

JobBank Canada reports that the employment outlook will be good for Dentists (NOC 3113) in British Columbia for the 2018-2020 period. WorkBC forecasts that from 2018-2023, the average employment growth rate will be 2.2%.

Types of Employers

Most dentists work in private practice, but you may also be employed in hospitals, clinics, public health facilities, or universities.

Salary

The annual provincial median salary for dentists is $104,055.

Dentists are paid directly by patients or by patient insurance companies. Much of a dentist's earnings are used to pay for their business expenses such as equipment, insurance, and staff salaries. Self-employed dentists must provide their own benefits.

Income varies based on their level of experience, location, and specialty. Salary also depends on how many regular patients a dentist sees.

Job Bank Canada provides annual salary for Dentists in BC – only the figures for Lower Mainland (Southwest region) are published:

Working Hours

Most dentists work 7 or 8 hours a day, 5 days a week. Dentists in private practice often have the flexibility to choose when and how many hours (full-time or part-time) they want to work. In some instances, you may be required to adjust hours to meet patients' needs. Early evening and weekend work is becoming more common.

Education and Experience

Dentists require:

- One to four years of pre-dentistry university studies, and

Dentists

A guide for newcomers to British Columbia

- university degree from a recognized dental program – a Doctor of Dental Medicine degree is most common; however, a Doctor of Dental Surgery degree or Bachelor of Dental Surgery degree may be sufficient
- in order to practice in B.C., all dentists must be registered with the College of Dental Surgeons of British Columbia (CDSBC).

The Faculty of Dentistry at the University of British Columbia offers the province's only program that leads to a Doctor of Dental Medicine degree (DMD)
